The Sworn Virgin

KOREOGRAPIA: OJEROJ PREVAZ
KOSTUMET: YLLKA BRADA
MENAXHERE E PRODUKSIONIT: AURELA KADRIU

DRITAT: MURSEL BEKTESHI

"... the play explores the Western obsession with the Burnnesha, the way international journalists and researchers often exploit and distort the phenomenon as being a product of a primitive society."

"...The play also warns that a consumerist society, one that swallows everything it is served, is susceptible to deceptive information, and when dense academic language is used, the truth might get even more distant and blurry." – SEEstage.org

"...Added layer was the exploitation of a Burnnesha as a quirky example of a queer show at a London variety show." – newsingermany.com

"Jeton Neziraj highlights, in the time of #MeToo, a new form of oppression, unexpected, which goes beyond the genre that we have chosen. Until the end, Sose wonders about his true identity. This drama is played out in great tension. The director Erson Zymberi opted for a bi-frontal scenic device. No decor, few accessories: a suitcase, a mirror and a much more kitsch element, a real bathtub. On the other hand, sumptuous costumes, in symbolic colors: white for the burnneshë, red for the Drag Queen." – UBU, European Stages

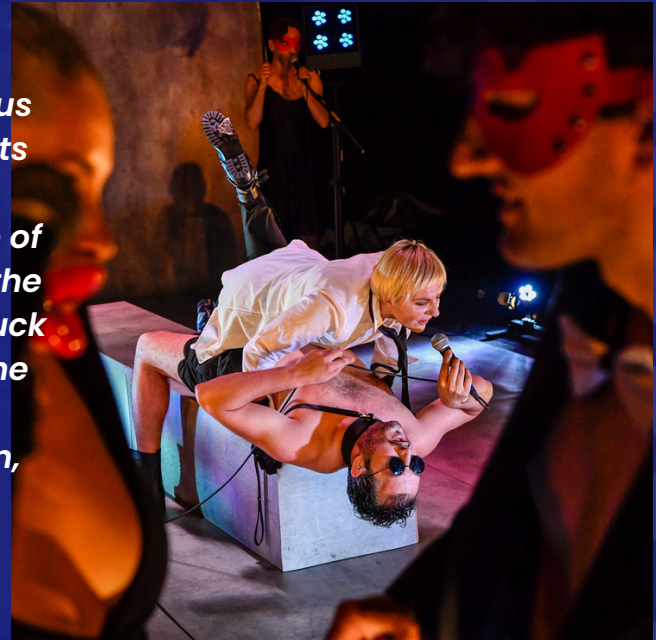

"The Sworn Virgin invites us to reflect on the human body, the social context and systems that determine a certain view on bodies." – Sbunker

The Handke Project

Produced by Qendra Multimedia in association with Mittelfest & Teatro della Pergola (Italy); Theater Dortmund (Germany); International Theatre Festival Scene MESS & National Theatre Sarajevo (Bosnia and Herzegovina)

"The Handke Project is an important, very courageous performance in English, investigating where the limits of political correctness are, and whether theater should deal with this at all. It testifies to the courage of the festival and the performance that at the end of the performance the actors shout not only the slogan Fuck you Handke, Fuck you Swedish Academy, but also the slogan Fuck you Salvini into the theater space as a guideline, asking the audience to repeat it with them, while the sponsor of the festival The Friuli region is governed by a member of Salvini's party, the Italian far-right." – Index.hu (Hungary)

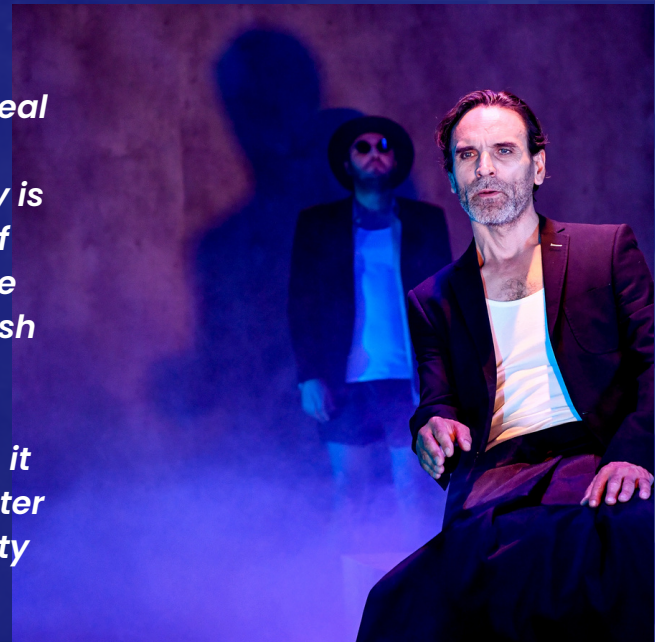

"Director Blerta Neziraj, moreover, raises a fundamental postmodern question of Lyotard: who legitimizes legitimizers? The show rejects Nobel's aesthetic authority and humiliates his political legitimacy.[...] Jeton Neziraj is against fascism. He is against literature that pats fascism or gets transformed into a "Troy Horse" for the general public. In an artistic sense, Neziraj has taken a position and – through art – he does not let the public decide or guess about Handke." – Latif Mustafa – sbunker (Kosovo)

The Handke Project

"[The Handke Project] was perhaps the most anticipated (or at least "hot") event of Mittelfest, a festival that for more than thirty years has compared cultures, theater and arts of Central Europe in centuries, with the cultural pulse of the continent." – Il Manifesto (Italy)

"Neziraj strips away Handke's artistry to reveal the real man beneath. Scenes are taken from his own work and actors take turns playing Handke. [...] ...the play is a monument to human suffering, particularly that of those caught up in the Srebrenica genocide. the little boy's innocence, his childish joy of skiing and the rush of the landscape seen from his perspective and not Handke's (who at last is no longer centre stage) widens the narrative out, contextualizes it and gives it meaning, depth and humanity. And there is no greater illustration of artistic responsibility than this." – Verity Healey – The Theatre Times (International)

"And here, we enter the land of Peter Handke, the Peter Pan-like subject of Kosovar playwright Jeton Neziraj's blistering satire... [...] Neziraj is widely regarded as Kosovo's national playwright, akin to what Vaclav Havel is to Czechoslovakia. And Neziraj shares Havel's innate playfulness and awareness of cruel, bureaucratic absurdities – all serving as a thin mask for the author's fury. All of these qualities emerge in flashes and clashes, like a fireworks display, through Blerta Neziraj's staging. Together, writer and director transform fury into an artistic bullet. – Steven Leigh Morris – Stage Raw (Los Angeles, USA)

SEEstage platform – www.seestage.org

In 2022 we proudly expanded SEEstage – the platform for independent theatre criticism and arts journalism in South East Europe. In 2022 we had a total of 20 regular writers, 11 of which were female critics and more than 35.000 readers from all over the world.

In 2022 we had over 60 shows of our six productions around Kosovo, Albania, North Macedonia, Montenegro, Serbia, USA, Italy, Germany, France, Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The shows we toured were:

- The Handke Project
- Balkan Bordello
- The Sworn Virgin
- The Return of Karl May
- In Five Seasons: An Enemy of the People
- Audience by Vaclav Havel
